In fact, Drive In Saturday has oddly been missing from many of the numerous Bowie compilations to have been released through the years. Happily it finally appeared on two of his 90's released compilations. Quite right too, it's a great track. 25 Wings My Love Paul McCartney's Wings took My Love as the only single release from the Red Rose Speedway album. It made number nine and also spent nine weeks in the chart. 31 Roger Daltrey Giving It All Away Roger Daltrey reached number five with his first and biggest solo hit. Giving It All Away was written by the then unknown Leo Sayer. 32 Handley Family Wam Bam Opportunity Knocks winners featuring a child vocalist. They reached number 30 and had no further hits. 33 Hot Chocolate Brother Louie Hot Chocolate reached number seven with Brother Louie. This is one that I clearly remember from Top Of The Pops, and hated it at first. I thought Who are this horrible group with the menacing looking lead singer? It wasn't long though, before I realised just how good this really was. 34 New Seekers Nevertheless (I'm In Love With You) This was actually credited to The New Seekers featuring Eve Graham. Eve was the dark haired one who'd voice was likened to Judith Durham from the original Seekers. I do remember this one, which is quite surprising considering it only spent this one week in the chart. 36 Stylistics Break Up To Make Up This third top 40 hit for the Stylistics had a disappointing chart run compared to the number 13 peak of Betcha By Golly Wow, and the number nine peak of I'm Stone In Love With You. This one entered at it's peak of number 34, and was gone two weeks later. Surprising really as this kind of song usually did really well in those days.
