Reference is, most of the unit is made up here in Tennessee at Ft. Campbell, Clarksville, Tennessee Above statement was made that Tennessee is full of toothless individuals. As said to make an insult to those who live here in this state.

While the Fort is located in both Tennessee and Kentucky, it is listed as Fort Campbell, KY, which is what our mail had as an address when my dad was assigned to the 101st. In the three years there, I never heard anyone call it Ft. Campbell, Tennessee. I also seem to remember that most of the senior non-coms that weren't on base housing were living in Hopkinsville, KY. Pretty much all us kids thought of us being stationed in KY. Just saying. Curtis L. Russell Odenton, MD (USA) Just someone on two wheels...

Which, by chance, are serving in the US military here in Tennessee. THAT, was what I was talking about. You don't like us, fine. Just be careful, it may be someone you need in time of trouble. Simple, but too simple for all of you with this negative view here. If putting a spin on all of the positive comments here is your expertise, then more power to you. To make everyone happy warm and fuzzy, I'll admit I have very few teeth, I can not spell nor construct a proper sentence, my family has no teeth, and the politicians from Tennessee are just as dumb. But I refuse to admit that in any way did I show disrespect towards any U.S. military branch. I had fun proving my point about starting a post reply with dumbass. I am done slopping around all of the muck being spewed out by the true dumbass. Cheers, Rick in Tennessee Dude, you're working on a world class flame out here. I mean Bruce's was a work of... well, it was really something. But you're on track to surpass it. You're not there yet, but the potential is there. Can I make a suggestion? Try to work God into it. Maybe you could branch into a JFC jag, that'd be worth some points. Don't you ever feel like you could root for LANCE if only he would marry the mother of his child? Then let us know!! This is some good stuff, keep it up. Dumbass. Bob Schwartz Well here's proof that LANCE doesn't respect the military (or wounded warriors): <http://wwpsoldierride.blogspot.com/2009/04/soldier-ride-golden-state...> motherfucker didn't even show up, but he deigned to let people be photographed with his bike ... and, no, even if he would marry the mother of his child, I could never root for him ... he's just hurt too many people, bro

Point is, don't disrespect Tennessee, there are a lot of folks here putting their lives on the line for this country. Dumbass, I had other priorities than military service.
